

BAD KARMA

Confessions of a reckless traveller in South-east Asia

TAMARA SHEWARD

Book of the Week – good karma, really ... self-deprecating humour ... hits the mark.

Wild-child writer Tamara Sheward, whose adventures are recounted in ... a humourous collection of politically-incorrect tales of Asian drug dealers and stoned backpackers ... irrepressible.

“Danger is my Business “ Sydney Morning Herald

The irrepressible Tamara Sheward revels in the seamier side of backpacking through Asia.

Horribly funny
John Killorn, The Word

As well as being honest, Sheward can be very funny. Capable of colouring in the pictures by finding the perfect metaphor.

Entertainingly witty and sarcastic, will have you chuckling ... Sheward's hilarious reflections on her travels are of the touchingly human variety, commonsense rather than lofty political correctness.

Hilarious and uniquely Australian
Lulu Roseman, The Blurb

About the Author

Tamara Sheward was born in New Jersey, USA of a low-caste Englishman and a Russian refugee and she took her first round the world trip at the tender age of 8 months. Her original intention was to pen a book of short stories based on some of her more off-beat travels but she was unable to stem the flow of ribald, gormless recklessness that was the true-life tale of her trip to South-East Asia.

Acknowledgements

Huge thanks to Sadie Mayne and Gillian Hennessy at Summersale and a world of appreciative (and messy) cocktails to Tara Wynne at Curtis Brown; uber-cheers and hogsheads of the finest potables to Bert Hingley for all his help and encouragement; an affectionate boot up the bum to my Brown; and a zillion lashings of love and immeasurable gratitude to my Mooma and Paplet for ridiculous amounts of support and faith, even through my darkest of rants. And o'course, to El. You rock my world m'loove.
